Dear Alex,

I'd like to tell you about my hometown before you visit. I live in a city called Tottori. It's a small, beautiful city on the Sea of Japan coast. It's surrounded by mountains and valleys. Tottori has a small population of around 182,000 people. It is cold here in the winter, and we get a lot of snow. It also gets hot and humid in the summer.

During your visit to Tottori, there are a few places I'd like to show you. The most famous place is the Tottori Sand Dunes. They are the largest dunes in Japan. I'll also take you to a beautiful old house that was built over 100 years ago, called Jinpukaku. We'll also go to some temples and shrines.

I'm sure you'll have a great time in Tottori. The coastline is very beautiful, there are many great restaurants and cafes, and the seafood is delicious.

Part 4

I think each of us has our own sources of happiness, like income, social status, job satisfaction, family and friends. And not all of us have the same definition of what happiness is, because each person values it by using different indicators and measures. Despite so many circumstantial factors, happiness, in general, should depend on how good we feel about life and how well we can manage our emotions. To hold on to a positive attitude toward life is much more important to happiness, because we need to face many kinds of depression in our daily life.
